Rewiring your home is the process of removing all old electrical wires, sockets and powerpoints and replacing them with new ones. Depending on the size of the home, this can be quite a large and daunting project, which is why it's important to enlist the help of a fully qualified, insured and licensed rewiring electrician – such as our team here at Reeves Electrical.

There are a few common reasons why your home may need rewiring. It might be because your home has recently flooded, or because you have accumulated severe damage to your electrical wires over time. In many cases, older properties undergo rewiring simply to enhance the safety of the electrical current throughout the house.
